8. With a view to preparing the existing Native Christian communities for the establishment in the future of independent Churches, it is important that a Native Episcopate should be gradually formed during the present transition time, having due regard to the stability of such Christian communities in matters of doctrine, discipline, and self-support. It is desirable that the Episcopate of the future Churches should be characterized by the simplicity of the Primitive Church.

Assistant Bishops, Native and English.

9. The first step towards the establishment of a Native Episcopate would seem generally to be the appointment of Native Assistant Bishops under the existing foreign Bishops; and steps would naturally

* The Lambeth Conference of 1888 adopted the following "Articles" as "supplying a basis" for "Home Reunion":—

1. The Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, as "containing all things necessary to salvation," and as being the rule and ultimate standard of faith.

2. The Apostles' Creed, as the Baptismal Symbol; and the Nicene Creed, as the sufficient statement of the Christian faith.

3. The two Sacraments ordained by Christ Himself—Baptism and the Supper of the Lord—ministered with unfailing use of Christ's words of Institution, and of the elements ordained by Him.

4. The Historic Episcopate, locally adapted in the methods of its administration to the varying needs of the nations and peoples called of God into the unity of His Church.

follow in due course of time for the formation of separate Dioceses to which they or other competent Natives might be appointed, as well as for their succeeding, in suitable cases, the foreign Bishops in the original Dioceses. It may, however, be expedient that some of the first Assistant Bishops should be English, and, preferably, experienced missionaries, to obviate the apparent invidiousness of keeping subordinate positions for Natives. Meanwhile, every effort should be made both to attract to the ministry of the Church the best men of the Native Christian community, and to prepare and test the leading Native clergy for higher positions by giving them the superintendence of districts and other functions of importance.

Appointment of Bishops now and hereafter.

10. With regard to the appointment of Bishops, the present position is that (a) in Colonial Churches with Constitutions they are appointed by the Churches themselves according to the provisions of the several Constitutions; (b) in India, the Bishops who have legally-formed Dioceses are appointed by the State; (c) in other cases, the Bishops are appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who consults informally the Missionary Societies which provide the stipend or are otherwise interested in the Diocese or episcopal jurisdiction; (d) Assistant Bishops are ordinarily selected by the Diocesan Bishops whom they assist. In the future Churches, the Constitutions will of course make provision for the appointment of Bishops, and it is important that such provision should recognise the right of the lay members of the Church to a voice in the selection.

Provision for racial and linguistic divisions.

11. Any new separate Dioceses for Native Bishops will most naturally be carved out of existing Dioceses, and in countries where there is but one race and language, or where different races and languages occupy different parts of the country, diocesan divisions would be easily arranged. But difficulties may arise in countries like Ceylon and some parts of India, where different races and languages are intermingled. In such cases racial and linguistic divisions cannot be disregarded, and it might be of advantage to provide separate episcopal oversight for different racial and linguistic sections of the population within the same area. If it be assumed that the principle of having none but territorial limits to all mutually independent episcopal jurisdictions will be adhered to,—and no doubt practical difficulties attach to any other system,—it might still be desirable that Assistant Bishops should be appointed to meet the difficulty, and there might be, within the ordinary diocesan organization, some distinct form of local and subordinate Church organization analogous to the Maori Church Boards in New Zealand.

Provincial organization.

12. Whenever several Dioceses have been established in a suitable area, it is expedient that they be combined in an Ecclesiastical Province, with a view to the substantial unity of the Church amid possibly many local diversities. And when an existing Episcopal Jurisdiction is to be divided into separate Dioceses the same end should be kept in view. Also, pending the constitution of a Province, any practicable intermediate steps should be taken towards securing the unity desired.

Extent of future Churches.

13. Distinct and independent Churches with regular Constitutions and General Synods should not be formed for small areas, but should, in ordinary cases, comprise several Dioceses.

Gradual development of future Churches

14. The future ecclesiastically independent Churches should not be thought of as entirely new Churches with novel Constitutions. They will naturally develop gradually out of the existing Church. It may be that in some cases a Constitution will have been adopted while all the Bishops are still foreigners, as in Japan; or it may be in other cases that Native Bishops will have been added side by side with the foreign Bishops in the existing Church, as in West Africa. The Native Episcopate and the independent Constitution need not, and probably will not, be formed simultaneously and per saltum. But in any case the ecclesiastical independence will come when the Constitution is adopted, providing for Synods or other governing bodies, upon which Bishops and Clergy and Laity are duly represented. The gradual character of the development will then be obvious. The Bishops, Clergy, and Laity of the Church out of which the independent Church has grown will be Bishops, Clergy, and Laity in the constituted and independent Church. They will assent to the Constitution, and thus become members of the independent Church. The Church will, so to speak, have come of age.

Gradual growth of native influence in the Church.

15. This natural development of the Church will not necessarily be affected by the nationality of its members. During the period of transition and preparation—probably a long period—the Native Clergy and Laity, as they increase in numbers, will increase in power; while the experience of foreign Clergy and Laity will be of great assistance to the wholesome development of the Church. If there are able men among the Natives, they will exercise influence in framing the Constitution. When the Constitution comes into working order, a Native majority will have power to elect to the Synods the representatives they prefer, whether Native or foreign. If the Constitution enables the Church to elect its own Bishops, those representatives will elect the men they most trust and honour, whether Native or foreign. Let Natives be the majority, as in the greater Mission-fields they certainly will be, and nothing can prevent their predominance. If foreigners retain for a time the virtual lead, it will be because the Natives voluntarily yield it to them, which, on any real theory of independence, they have a right to do.

Union of Races in one Church.

16. Should Native predominance in the independent Church issue in a predominantly Native Episcopate, and in Native predominance in the Synods, the position of the foreign members of the Church—e.g. the English in India or China—should not give rise to any insuperable difficulty. It is unnecessary now to forecast how that position should be dealt with. But inasmuch as the unity of the Church in a given area is most in accordance with the spirit of the Christian religion, one object of which is to unite different races in Christ and not to separate them, it is earnestly to be hoped, and aimed at, that where independence is achieved such measures shall be taken as will obviate, as far as possible, racial divisions in the Church, and prevent the alienation of any section of its members. The welfare of the Church will be most effectually promoted by the corporate unity and co-operation of all its members, of whatever race, each race contributing of its national and spiritual gifts for the edification of the one Body.

Special problems in India.

17. The problem of the constitution of an independent Church in India is complicated by the State connexion of the present English

Episcopate there. There does not appear, however, to be any material obstacle to the appointment of Assistant-Bishops, whether English or Native; and the arrangements made in recent years for the Bishoprics of Chota Nagpore, Lucknow, and Tinnevelly seem to show that Dioceses, or quasi-Dioceses, may be formed, with a jurisdiction based upon voluntary compact, even within the area allotted by Acts of Parliament to certain Bishoprics. In this way, and by means of the establishment of voluntary Diocesan Synods or Conferences, preparatory steps might be taken, and to some extent have already been taken, by the existing Bishops, towards the formation of an independent Indian Church, having its own Constitution and electing its own Bishops. The co-operation of the missionaries and Native Clergy and Laity in the preparatory measures towards the formation of such a Church and its Synods would be greatly to its advantage, and prepare the way for the predominance in it of the Native element. In India it is especially important that the Church or Churches should not be racial but territorial, seeing that (a) the Eurasian population is neither English nor, in the strict sense, Native; (b) the most influential class of Native Christians is English-speaking, and disposed to connect itself more and more with the English residents; (c) members of some of the Indian races are so scattered that a racial Church organization would not reach them; (d) the union of races in the Church will tend to remove the caste spirit which still exists in some of the Christian communities. India, but for some special disabilities arising from the State connexion of the English Episcopate, presents an exceptionally favourable field for the unifying influence of the Christian Church, while affording every opportunity for local elasticity and diversity within the Church. Whatever may be the future arrangements for the Episcopate in India, there is no reason for fear lest the formation of a self-governing Church should interfere with the provision by the Government of religious ministrations for its officials and its troops, any more than with the supply of missionaries for the Heathen by Missionary Societies of the Mother Church.

The Church and the surrounding Heathen.

18. The existence of a large Heathen population, and of missionary agencies for their evangelization, within the area proposed for an independent Church or separate Diocese, is no obstacle to the formation of such Church or Diocese. It may even be turned to advantage, as affording a convenient sphere for the missionary activity of the Native Christians in combination with the foreign missionaries; such combination, however difficult, being an object to be earnestly desired, and the relations between the foreign missionaries and the Church or Diocese being susceptible of wise adjustment.

Ecclesiastical and financial independence.

19. It is of essential importance, at every step, to distinguish clearly between the ecclesiastical "independence" of a Church, or of a single Diocese of a Church, and the financial "independence" of a Native Christian community in regard to assistance from the C.M.S. or any other Missionary Society; and to recognize, on the one hand, that such Native Christian community may be financially independent, and yet be still, for the time, a part of the Church of England, and, on the other hand, that the ecclesiastical independence of a Church or Diocese is not necessarily inconsistent with financial assistance from sister Churches or Dioceses or from Missionary Societies, either for its pastoral or educational or evangelistic work. It is the more important to recognize this, because in fact the Native Christians are, and for a long time will be, a comparatively small body surrounded by masses of Heathen. The Missionary work among these Heathen should be the work of the local Church; but foreign Missionary Societies should take their part in it, and thereby they would practically be aiding the local Church both by men and by money. Nevertheless, the importance of entire self-support cannot be too urgently insisted on.

Church patronage, finance, &c.

20. Many questions of great importance to the Native Christian community will arise, both during the transition time and in the formation of independent Churches, touching Church patronage, Church finance, Church property, &c. The Constitutions of various existing Colonial Churches, and of the Church of Ireland, and those provisionally adopted for Sierra Leone, the Niger Delta, &c., will supply valuable suggestions. As regards patronage, it is important that the Constitutions of the independent Churches should make judicious provision for its exercise. Congregations or groups of congregations should have a distinct voice in the appointment of their pastors, who should not be imposed upon them solely by some central authority. As regards finance, there would no doubt be Church funds of various kinds, general funds for a Diocese or a whole Church, local congregational or parochial funds, and special trust funds for particular purposes. Three great objects should be aimed at in all these arrangements—viz. (1) to give the laity of the Church an adequate share in its administration; (2) to enable congregations having common views and sympathies (such as those now connected with the C.M.S.) to continue the mutual co-operation to which they have been accustomed; (3) to avoid mere congregationalism, and to foster the solidarity and unity of the Church as a body. There is no necessary antagonism between the second and the third of these objects. Artificial bonds of uniformity and centralization would always be liable to be broken; while the possession by individual congregations or groups of congregations of reasonable liberty in regard to patronage and funds will conduce to the real solidarity and unity of the Church.

Church Councils; their future use.

21. In forming the Constitutions of the future independent Churches, the present Church Council system prevailing in several Missions of the Church Missionary Society and other Church Societies may prove useful, with whatever necessary modifications. (a) In countries where all the Missionary work is that of the Church Missionary Society, the present Church Council system would naturally be developed into the new Diocesan system. (b) Where the Missions are those of different agencies, the Councils might or might not conveniently find a place in the Diocesan system, but in either case their functions would be important. Diocesan organization might well leave room for a convenient form of local patronage board for some of the congregations or pastorates, and for convenient bodies which would administer local Church funds and receive such financial or other help as the Church Missionary Society may feel it right and desirable to render. It would seem quite possible for the independent Church to arrange for the recognition of the C.M.S. Church Councils, or some bodies developed from them, for such purposes, consistent with the constitution of the Church. It would be neither right nor wise to interfere with the unity of the Church by setting up an imperium in imperio; but, on the other hand, it is reasonable that the Church Missionary Society's property, such as mission-churches, parsonages, schoolhouses, &c., should only be transferred to the independent Churches, and its funds granted, with some security for their just and proper use and application.

Maintenance of spiritual and evangelical principles in the future Churches.

22. This Memorandum is necessarily based on the assumption that the Church of England will remain loyal to Holy Scripture and to Apostolic Christianity, retaining the position, at once Catholic and Protestant, to which, putting away mediæval accretions, it reverted at the Reformation; and that its daughter Churches forming the Anglican Communion will, in close connexion with the Mother Church, be kept equally faithful. At the same time, even within these limits, a great national Church, and still more a world-wide federation of sister and daughter Churches, is necessarily comprehensive; and in such a comprehensive Church there is certain to be diversity of opinion and even risk of error. With a view, therefore, to the firm maintenance of Scriptural doctrine, and of spiritual principles in ecclesiastical affairs, in the Native Sections of the existing Churches, and in the independent and predominantly Native Churches of the future, it is important that the Church Missionary Society should take its part, both at home and (by its representatives and missionaries) abroad, in all diocesan and other movements directed towards the development of the Church in its Mission-fields, and thus be able to exercise its just influence, in a fair and Christian spirit, for the advocacy of the principles it holds dear. In like manner, while the missionaries should more and more be relieved from the pastoral care of converts, and be free to give themselves to their proper work of evangelizing the Heathen, it is important that their personal influence—so distinct from official control—should not be lost to the Native Christians, but be earnestly and wisely exercised in fostering among them the same spiritual and evangelical principles. Important as is the ecclesiastical organization discussed in this Memorandum, the maintenance of the Truth of the Gospel in the Native Christian communities is of far greater importance; and the Church Missionary Society would be unworthy of the position in which, in the providence of God, it has been placed, if it did not do all in its power, at all times and in all circumstances, to foster among the Native Christians who are the fruit of its labours a watchful spirit against error in doctrine or life, and unswerving loyalty to the supreme authority of the Word of God.

NOTICE TO TREASURERS AND SECRETARIES OF ASSOCIATIONS

End of Financial Year. Final Remittance.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY beg to remind the Treasurers and Secretaries of Associations that the Society's Financial Year ends on the 31st of March, and that they should make their final remittance and forward their Contribution Lists immediately after closing their Accounts.

No Balances shown.

Sums remaining unpaid on the 31st of March are not shown in the Accounts as Balances. The Contribution Lists should therefore agree in total with the amounts actually paid to the Parent Society to that date.

Branches.

Where an Association has Branches connected with it, the Money and Accounts of the Branches must be forwarded to the Treasurer or Secretary of the Association some time before the date for forwarding to London. Branches not doing so in good time shall be considered as self-excluded.

Branch Associations should in every case, where practicable, forward their Money and Lists through the Association with which they are connected, and not direct to the Parent Society.

Contribution Lists and Accounts.

Lists and Accounts (if not sent with the money) must be forwarded not later than April 8th (see last paragraph but one). At the head of the List should be furnished the name of the Diocese, Archdeaconry, Deanery, and County in which each parish is situate. It is very essential that this information should be given accurately to ensure correct entry in Annual Report. The date at which the Accounts of the Association are closed, and the names of the Local Officers, should be specified. Should no Officers be named it will be assumed that they remain the same as in the previous Report, and the List will be so printed.

Accurate information essential.

Local Officers.

The Contribution Lists should be written legibly to avoid mistakes in printing, and made up in the manner in which the same are printed in the Parent Society's Report. Forms of Account and ruled paper with directions for filling up the form may be had on application to the Lay Secretary at the Society's House. Where the Account or the List is a printed one, two copies should be forwarded. It would greatly facilitate the work of adapting Local Reports for the Society's Report if under each of the several classes of contributions (e.g. Annual Subscriptions, Boxes, &c.), the items were divided into two parts and printed separately, thus:—

Forms of Account.

Printed Lists.

(1) Items of 10*s.* and over (in alphabetical order)
(2) Items of under 10*s.* ... ... } With separate totals for each.

Appropriate Contributions. Special Funds and General Fund.

Particulars of Appropriated Contributions and Contributions to Special Funds paid through Associations are printed with the Lists to which they respectively belong.

In order that a correct analysis of the Society's Income may be made, it is essential that the composition of each amount at the time of remittance should be given under the divisions of General, Appropriated and Special Funds. Under the divisions of Appropriated and Special Funds the several precise objects and amounts for each should be named.

Remittances should be made early in Financial Year.

The Committee take this opportunity of requesting that Local Treasurers will remit to the Parent Committee at the end of every quarter (or oftener in cases of large sums being received) any sum in their hands, over and above the amount required to meet disbursements, &c., the balance being remitted when the Local Accounts are closed for the year. This course would tend to equalise in a greater degree the Income and Expenditure in the earlier months of the Society's Financial Year, and save the Society a considerable yearly sum.

RESPECTING REMITTANCES.

(See last paragraph but one.)

Remittances.

Remittances may be made through Local Bankers, and their correspondents in London, to the account of the Society at WILLIAMS DEACON AND MANCHESTER AND SALFORD BANK, Limited, 20 Birchin Lane, London, in which case it is requested that advice of the same be sent by post addressed to the Lay Secretary.

Or Drafts may be forwarded direct to the C.M. House, payable to D. MARSHALL LANG, Lay Secretary of the Church Missionary Society, and crossed WILLIAMS DEACON AND MANCHESTER AND SALFORD BANK, Limited, acct. C.M.S.

Post Office and Postal Orders should be drawn on the General Post Office, and be made payable to D. MARSHALL LANG.
